The Path to Our Vision ...

Customer service Is Our Mission

At Moravia Cans, we put our customers at the heart of everything we do. With extensive experience in aluminium aerosol can production, we deliver tailored solutions that support both standard and custom designs to meet individual brand needs.

Nature Is Our Responsibility

Aluminium is infinitely recyclable, making sustainability a natural part of our products. We focus on responsible material sourcing, efficient energy use, and waste reduction across production. Our processes support circularity and long-term environmental performance.

Technology Is Our Engine

We continuously invest in modern production technologies, including extrusion, shaping, and advanced decoration processes. These innovations allow us to produce lightweight, high-quality cans with precise shapes and finishes. Efficient manufacturing ensures stable output and consistent performance at scale.

Employees Are Our Heart

Our employees work with modern technologies in a production environment where their ideas matter. We support teamwork, skill development, and safe working conditions. Competitive benefits and stable employment are key parts of our approach.

Our Approach and Principles

We are committed to ensuring that modern slavery does not occur in our supply chains or in any part of our business. Moravia Cans supports this commitment through its Code of Ethics, which was published in 2025.

Moravia Cans is specifically committed to protecting human rights and combating modern slavery. Moravia Cans also respects fundamental labour rights, including the right to freedom of association and collective bargaining.

In addition, further principles and procedures are in place governing ethical conduct within the company. All these areas, including modern slavery and respect for human rights, are further specified in the Corporate Social Responsibility and Employee Code of Ethics documents.

Identification and Assessment of Risks within Moravia Cans and the Supply Chain

As a responsible company, we operate a risk assessment system that helps us identify and manage potential social, ethical and environmental risks both within Moravia Cans and throughout our supply chain.

Risk Assessment Based on Available Documentation

Selected suppliers are subject to an in-depth risk assessment. When deciding which suppliers to focus on, we consider a range of factors, including their industry, geographical location and the risk of human rights violations, including modern slavery. We also continuously monitor media sources to ensure that we are alerted to potential risks within our supply chains.

On-Site Assessments and Audits

Based on the results of the risk assessment, a supplier may be required to undergo either an on-site assessment carried out by our representative or an ethical audit conducted by a third party. Audits are usually carried out by a team of internal auditors.

Supplier Certifications and Declarations

For suppliers of certain products, we require specific certification or other confirmation of compliance regarding their approach to human rights and, specifically, modern slavery. All our aluminium suppliers hold ASI certification. All our significant suppliers either comply with our Supplier Code of Ethics or declare their commitment to these rights through their own Code of Ethics.

Identification of Risks within Our Plant

We expect every Moravia Cans employee to act as an ambassador for our high standards.
We encourage employees to report any concerns regarding non-compliance with legal requirements, including any matters related to modern slavery, either directly to company management or via the reporting hotline available online to all employees. This enables employees to report concerns easily and anonymously, without fear of retaliation or discrimination.

Modern Slavery Training

We focus on socially responsible and environmentally sustainable sourcing, including issues related to modern slavery. This approach has led to increased awareness of the issue throughout the company and at all levels, including the presentation of these topics to senior management.

Topics related to modern slavery are presented to our key procurement employees, and we will continue to develop online training for employees responsible for procurement decisions.

Accountability and Effectiveness

Moravia Cans remains committed to protecting human rights and safety throughout our supply chain. We will review our progress and the effectiveness of our measures to combat modern slavery on an annual basis.

During the period covered by this statement, we identified no evidence and received no reports of modern slavery, either within Moravia Cans or among our suppliers.

Looking Ahead

In the coming period, we will focus primarily on raising awareness of this issue and improving understanding of the key aspects of modern slavery in order to support its identification.

Conclusion & Signature

We remain firmly committed to addressing modern slavery as part of our broader human rights strategy, which continues to underpin everything we do.

We recognise the importance of collaboration in increasing the overall effectiveness and reach of our programmes and in supporting a fairer and more socially inclusive world.

This statement sets out the steps we took to combat modern slavery during 2025 and up to mid-2026.
